As is tradition started on the sherry, wine with the turkey, then onto port, brandy, and likely to finish with a malt whisky.
One of the extended family has me beat though, was on a magnum last night and got through three bucks fizzes before midday.

It's called cachaça. It is a strong drink, it "burns" your throat, It has 40% alcohol content. It is made from sugar cane and aged in balsam barrels. I like this Ypioca, it is the best cachaça in Brazil in my opinion, it’s made in my state. I like to drink it while I suck on lemons. I'm fucking drunk right now HUE

No, rum is made with the sugarcane juice, "melaço", a by-product of the sugar production process. Cachaça, on the other hand, is made with fresh juice, which we call garapa.

The problem is that American absinthe isn't quite the same as actual absinthe because of retarded restrictions on brewing based on shit that happened 100 years ago when cunts would smoke opium and drink absinthe at the same time, which caused some fucked up shit. Now that weed is legal in many places maybe they'll stop being cunts about the THC levels and we can get some of the more-real stuff, but 100 years of suspicion and "it gives you hallucinations" meme probably harms the quality.

i dont fear death, even a long slow painful death, theres no avoiding it. the stinky cigarette smell can be washed away and i wont even notice the raspy feeling in my throat by the end of tomorrow night.
i just like the moody atmosphere of drinking whisky and smoking cigarettes, with it having to be cigarettes as i know theyre a bit dirty and degenerate compared to pipe smoking or weed, plus with me being a former full time smoker of 10+ years it feels like ive 'given up' on something, like im accepting self improvement is a waste of time. sets you up nicely to be a bit depressed and reflective, which makes the moment feel like an important occasion.
if i had a proper garden like in my old place id maybe build a fire outside and do it once a month while burning stuff, its pretty therapeutic.

The joke is that the place is called "Sneed's Feed & Seed" which is clever in itself and quite funny to those with a mature sense of humour but what's really just hilarious about it is that if you look closely at the front of this store, Sneed's Feed & Seed, you can see a line that reads "Formerly Chuck's". Now, this might go over the average viewer's head as this, THIS, is peak comedy. I doubt anything will ever be as funny as the joke about Sneed's Feed & Seed. Are you ready for this one? So, like I said, the place is called "Sneed's Feed & Seed" and this sign says "Formerly Chuck's", which means that when Chuck owned the place, well, I don't have to tell you...
